Description

A striking pair of Regency period cut glass decanters, each beautifully crafted with precision and elegance. The bodies are richly decorated with a band of deep diamond cutting, creating a brilliant sparkle that catches the light from every angle. Below, a panel-cut section provides a refined contrast, emphasising the clarity and weight of the glass. The necks are stepped and faceted, leading gracefully to wide rims fitted with sunburst stoppers, finely serrated around the edge for a crisp, architectural finish. This bold silhouette is both practical and decorative, embodying the Neoclassical refinement of early 19th century glassmaking.
